DAILY BREAKDOWN

Date	Topics/ Skills covered	Model?
Morning	Students will be introduced to watercolours and inks and their properties and encouraged to explore them through a number of guided exercises. Students will learn about colour mixing and layering paint with watercolour, as well as being introduced to the varying tonal values of ink and how this can be adjusted with the addition of water. Students will be introduced to various basic watercolour techniques and will be encouraged to experiment with how different pigments interact with one another as well as how watercolours and inks may be used successfully in conjunction with one another.	NO
Afternoon	During the afternoon session students will apply techniques learnt in the morning to their interpretation of a still-life, which they can construct themselves or with the support of the tutor. Students can choose to work solely in watercolour/ink or a combination of the two. Students will be guided through the process of constructing a composition and will be able to experiment with working at a larger scale should they wish. At the end of the session students will have at least one finished artwork to take home and a selection of colour and tonal studies and experimentations.	NO

Course Copy	In this one day taster course tutor and professional artist Laura Ribbons will gently guide students through the process of exploring two wonderfully dynamic mediums: watercolours and ink. Students will be introduced to a range of techniques and will spend the morning exploring the properties of both and making a series of colour studies. In the afternoon, students will have the opportunity of making a larger work, creating their own composition and working in watercolours, inks or a combination of the two to paint their own still life incorporating plants and objects. Laura is an experienced tutor and has been working professionally with inks and watercolours for over a decade, she is a passionate advocate for the two mediums. The session is open to both complete beginners and more experienced artists alike and will be relaxed and friendly. Laura believes in taking an exploratory approach to teaching and will support
